Ello Mey!

Cures your Ears!
Really I shouldn't tell in-giving, not, after how mean you were to me Yesterday. You sure were some mean, weren't you? and I think the New Year —
which absolutely no effect upon you — well, well!

To-day we had a-
luncheon you would have enjoyed — and wished
that you were there

tration — and another week to exist. There is only one thing to console me and that is that there can't possibly be many more people or hands left for it to get up before. Can only hope ~~now~~ and wait some more.

Feel Rose I am making all possible inquiries about that position and. If Elma is she cares to take it, she can have it. If she cares to, she can call me up to-morrow night, to help me enjoy mine.

" It got black before my eyes when I saw fried ham in bread crumbs, and to add insult to injury, it was served with macaroni smothered in milk, butter and some rather strong smelling as well as strong tasting cheese. Now, aren't you sorry you weren't here to share it with me?

Fare thee well. O's Hallow

This morning but with no promising results. It is now up to the two C dancers or come down with them, or, if not, I can tell her all about it on Friday night.

I really do think it has become a better morning, altho this morning I
fairly froze to death.
How did my ex-husband fare? I was relieved to find the dispensary a little heated.

Mr. Swallow came in to-day. He was quite sick.
Was glad to see him. Shall see you to-morrow night and hope you are going to be ever so much wiser than you were Yesterday. Your former wife!
